COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES SOCIAL SCIENCES DIVISION

Commencement Ceremony

SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 2021

Congratulations, class of 2021! My name is Bruce Blonigen and I am the Tykeson Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. You'll probably notice my signature on your diploma and that's because you are now a graduate of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Our college is by far the largest on campus and spans the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences—from philosophy to physics and classics to chemistry. What binds us all together in the College of Arts and Sciences is a liberal arts education. People often don't know what a liberal arts education means and sometimes people even think it implies a particular political persuasion. It doesn't. In this context “liberal” means “generous”—like, “wow, mom, you gave me a very liberal portion of vegetables on my plate.”

I want to get just one main idea across to you today. And that is . . . that the skills you have developed with your liberal arts education are truly your superpowers—for both your personal and professional life.

Why is this?

It's because a liberal arts education is one that exposes you to a broad and generous education that hones your abilities in critical thinking, problem solving, and communication in multiple and diverse settings. Whether in a language course or an earth sciences lab, you have been challenged to think, communicate, and problem-solve. The settings and methods are different, but the same underlying skills are being developed.

As you can imagine, these are exactly the types of general skills that employers want. Employers can train you up quickly on the nuts and bolts of your new job in a matter of weeks or months, but they typically don't have the time and resources to teach you how to think, problem-solve, and communicate. They want graduates who have developed and honed these deeper foundational—dare I say it, liberal arts—skills over their years in college. And I'm not just saying this, it's backed up by numerous surveys of employers by the National Association of Colleges and Employers as well as other organizations.

Employers want these skills from you, but the truth is that having these skills means that you will have much greater flexibility in jobs and career paths over your lifetime. Most occupations drastically change or become obsolete within a decade. Someone with strong critical thinking, problem solving, and communication skills will be able to flourish in nearly any professional setting and won't be tied to any one employer.

These skills are also important in other aspects of your life. Life is generally not a series of black and white situations, it's nuanced, complicated, ambiguous.

Critical thinking, experience with diverse views, and problem-solving are vital for navigating the shades of gray you will face. I think this is especially true in this moment of polarized political views that currently threatens our democracy. We need people from opposite sides of the political spectrum to start using these liberal arts skills to find compromise and solutions to our world's major challenges.

Liberal arts skills are your superpowers. For them to work for you, you need to understand them and be able to explain them to others, especially prospective employers. Think back to your most challenging writing assignments, your most thought-provoking conversations where you and your classmates grappled with difficult issues, or that group project where differing perspectives were difficult to navigate and manage. Those are the examples where your superpowers of critical thinking, communication, and problem-solving shone. Be ready to share those as examples of your abilities!

These are clearly uncertain times and we understand that this has made the near term more difficult for many of you. Your superpowers will help you, but this is also the time to reach out for help and support. One resource that I want to mention is our UO Career Center. Their career services are free to you for an entire year after graduation. Use them! And just keep remembering that: When nothing is certain, everything is possible. Now, more than ever is the time to think creatively, try different things, and give yourself grace when there are bumps in the road.

On behalf of our entire university, our college, and the teachers, staff, advisors, and other UO folks who have supported you through your career here, I am sorry that we can't deliver these comments to you in person, and that we can't be having a great big celebration on campus with your family, friends, and teachers.

But despite these circumstances, I want you to know we are so incredibly proud to call you a Duck. You are, and will continue to be, part of our University of Oregon family. So, be well. Use your superpowers for good, and we look forward to hearing about your future successes.

Go Ducks!

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Bruce Blonigen". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first letter of each name being significantly larger and more prominent.

HONORING NATIVE PEOPLES AND LANDS

The University of Oregon is located on Kalapuya Ilihi, the traditional Indigenous homeland of the Kalapuya people. Following treaties between 1851 and 1855, Kalapuya people were dispossessed of their Indigenous homeland by the United States government and forcibly removed to the Coast Reservation in Western Oregon. Today, Kalapuya descendants are primarily citizens of the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde and the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians, and they continue to make important contributions to their communities, to the UO, to Oregon, and to the world.

In following the Indigenous protocol of acknowledging the original people of the land we occupy, we also extend our respect to the nine federally recognized Indigenous nations of Oregon: the Burns Paiute Tribe, the Confederated Tribes of the Coos, Lower Umpqua and Siuslaw Indians, the Confederated Tribes of the Grand Ronde, the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians, the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation, the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, the Coquille Indian Tribe, the Cow Creek Band of Umpqua Tribe of Indians, and the Klamath Tribes. We express our respect to the many more tribes who have ancestral connections to this territory, as well as to all other displaced Indigenous peoples who call Oregon home.
