Closing Remarks

John English

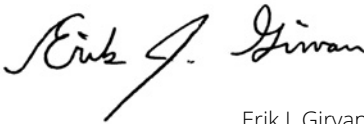

Welcome!

Thank you for coming to the 2020 Conflict and Dispute Resolution Master's Program commencement celebration. As the 15th year of the conflict and dispute resolution (CRES) program draws to a close, our faculty and staff are honored to join the family and friends of our graduates in marking this auspicious moment in their lives.

We rejoice with each graduate as they find and pursue their path, whether local or international, traditional or groundbreaking. It is with great pride that we watch our graduates go forth into the world, joining our alumni in improving the communities to which they contribute.

Graduates, it has been a pleasure partnering with you on this leg of your journey. We look forward to being your colleagues. Congratulations!

“We have thought of peace as passive and war as the active way of living. The opposite is true. War is not the most strenuous life. It is a kind of rest cure compared to the task of reconciling our differences. From war to peace is not from the strenuous to the easy existence. It is from the futile to the effective, from the stagnant to the active, from the destructive to the creative way of life . . . The world will be regenerated by the people who rise above these passive ways and heroically seek by whatever hardship, by whatever toil, the methods by which people can agree.”

—Mary Parker Follett (1868–1933)

Honoring Native Peoples

The University of Oregon is located on Kalapuya Ilihi, the traditional indigenous homeland of the Kalapuya people. Following treaties between 1851 and 1855, Kalapuya people were dispossessed of their indigenous homeland by the United States government and forcibly removed to the Coast Reservation in western Oregon. Today, descendants are citizens of the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde Community of Oregon and the Confederated Tribes of the Siletz Indians of Oregon, and continue to make important contributions in their communities, at the UO, and across the land we now refer to as Oregon.*

We express our respect for all federally recognized tribal nations of Oregon. This includes the Burns Paiute Tribe, the Confederated Tribes of the Coos, Lower Umpqua and Siuslaw Indians, the Confederated Tribes of the Grand Ronde Community of Oregon, the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians of Oregon, the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation, the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, the Coquille Indian Tribe, the Cow Creek Band of Umpqua Tribe of Indians, and the Klamath Tribes. We also express our respect for all other displaced Indigenous peoples who call Oregon home.

*We thank the Native Strategies Group for this portion of our statement.

This is statement is borrowed with permission from the University of Oregon Libraries. For more information, including resources, please see the UO Libraries website at <https://library.uoregon.edu/honoring-native-peoples-and-lands>

A land acknowledgment honors and recognizes indigenous territories and indigenous people respective to the location(s) we currently work and live. A land acknowledgment serves as a reminder that the land you currently occupy has long been occupied by indigenous peoples who have distinct linguistic, cultural, and historical connection to the land. We encourage you to learn more about the indigenous people of the spaces you live and are celebrating from today.
